ANTHROPOSOPHIC AND INTEGRATIVE MEDICINE

StillBleu

A PAUSE. A LISTENING. A WAY BACK TO HEALTH.

*StillBleu means taking a pause:
a moment to slow down, listen and reconnect.*

The clinic follows a salutogenic perspective: rather than focusing on what causes illness, it also explores the conditions that help health, vitality and resilience.

Medical responsibility and human attention are held together. Every consultation begins with listening, with careful clinical observation, and with an understanding of the whole person — body, mind, emotions and environment.

My work includes

- Anthroposophic external therapies
- Medical consultations with a whole-person perspective
- Complementary supportive approaches chosen carefully
- Lifestyle, rhythm and self-care guidance
- Listening for the person behind the symptoms

The question

What supports health?

The practice is guided by a single question: what restores vitality, clarity and peace?

This is not a search for quick fixes, but for a lasting change.

Guiding principles

- Supporting health, not only treating illness
- Working with rhythm, warmth, touch and awareness
- Recognising the individual as a whole person
- Encouraging active participation in healing
- Combining approaches thoughtfully and responsibly
